WWW.NORRISNIMAN.COM/PRINTS

I am Norris Niman, I'm a Swedish photographer, Nikon Creator, and professional adventurer living in Iceland. My work is all about the excitement of the outdoors, the peace in nature, the harsh north, and the lifestyle of the adventurer. My ultimate goal is to capture the remote, untamed parts of the world and share them with you, making them seem a little less far away and unknown. The unknown can to many seem like a scary place, but by bringing you along grand adventures through my lens, I can show you the beauty in even the harshest of wild nature, as I love turning it into a massive playground.

Now I want you to be able to hang a piece of nature on your wall that inspires you to go on your own adventures. A piece that will also remind everyone entering your space of how beautiful our earth is, especially the off the beaten track places. I hope you will enjoy my North by Nature Collection.

NORTH by NATURE

Explore the rugged beauty of raw, untamed nature doing its northernmost thing in my 'North by Nature' collection. Featuring 6 stunning photographs from the forgotten or forbidden corners of the north, that capture majestic moments witnessed by only a very few, all showcasing the power and splendor of these wild landscapes. With a tonal coherence that makes these pieces work as well together as they do on their own, the 'North by Nature' collection is the perfect way to transport yourself to some of the most beautiful and unspoiled places in the northern hemisphere.

The collection will be Limited Edition and offered in four sizes, Small, Medium, Large and X-Large. All without printed borders, making the artwork fill the whole frame. All prints will be sold as print only, however the sizes S, M, L will have a pre-framed option, ready to hang as soon as it gets to you.

THE COLLECTION

Looking For Equilibrium By Nature

As the glaciers retreat, their juices embark on a long migration towards warmer waters. Still in search of equilibrium, they fight their way across the lands in organised chaotic patterns. I've always wanted to capture the scale of this wet migration and finally came close by stitching together 46 individual top-down drone photos into this massive photo. And this is still just a small part of the river delta.

Triangles By Nature

Emerging from their own reflections, these young mountains are hoping to grow tall one day and reach all the way to the snowy skies. Until then, they're hanging out on one of the best-looking extreme beaches out there.

The sun on this particular autumn evening dipped below the clouds of a passing storm just for a minute before saying goodbye for the day, and the landscape turned into a masterpiece of a painting.

Waving Away by Nature

I've been trying to nail this shot since 2017. Having mastered the technique of taking off and landing drones from moving boats, the whales are always gone by the time the camera is up. Greenland never stops delivering though. As the wind stopped for just a few minutes, the fjord going silent with only a camera shutter clicking away and echoing between the towering mountains, and not a human in any direction for days, two sperm whales popped up next to our sailboat just in time for this shot to come together, before the whales disappeared into the abyss to never be seen again.

States Of Matter By Nature

No place on Earth is as fiercely protected as the inner sanctum of Greenland's east coast. Guarded by millions of broken glacial pieces forming an almost impenetrable wall of icebergs, all telling you - this is not a place for humans. This is not planet Earth anymore. Still, we set out on an ambitious expedition to sail this forbidden coast. Looking for shelter for the evening in the little that this fjord offered against the extreme elements, the ocean around us started to freeze, and we had to make an escape plan before getting stuck for the long night.

Bonfire By Nature

With colossal power and no concern for its surroundings, newborn earth emerges from its womb to shape our land as it pleases. It has decided to put a new generation of mountains right here. With no regard for us humans, nor our insignificant time scale on this land, all we can do is admire, and take a step back as the lava creeps closer. Not in photo: the hundreds of people who brought their friends, kids, mothers and grandmothers to spend an evening by the fire, turning utterly uncontrolled chaos into a bonfire festival.

Ice Cube By Nature

Having started high up on the Greenlandic ice cap hundreds of years ago, this lone iceberg separated from its glacial family and has set out on a journey. Leaving its nest and heading out into the world to find its purpose, maybe sink a boat somewhere, swim with whales, be towed to the Bahamas for party ice, or find other icebergs to rub against. It doesn't yet know that it will never make it that far in solid form. I only managed to shoot about 10% of the icebergs we saw. This one was happy to reveal a little more skin than that.
